

For the literature review, the team split up the work evenly where each person took two to three articles. I chose three articles, the first of which focused on predicting stock movement using sentiment analysis of twitter feeds with neural networks (kolasani et al). The second article dived into stock market trend prediction models using data mining techniques (Iyinoluwa et al). Lastly, I reviewed an article that focused on the effects of twitter sentiment on stock price returns